UPDATE: Temporary interruption to supply

Latest update:

The cause of the supply interruption has been identified and is currently being rectified.

Generator dispatch is planned to recommence on Monday 1 June and all back orders will be cleared by Thursday 4 June.

Our Service team are working through customer requirements individually and will be in touch throughout Thursday and Friday this week to confirm resupply deliveries. We appreciate the urgent nature of this situation and want to make sure we are providing you with the best possible information to meet your needs.

In addition, ANSTO has a number of pre-made Iodine 131 capsules available and will be importing Lutetium 177 from ITG on available flights out of Europe for the next two weeks.

Following a set recovery plan, the ANSTO health products team expect to return to the current supply pattern by Thursday 4 June. Further contingencies are in place should the plan not proceed as expected.

We would like to thank members of the Nuclear Medicine Working Group, AANMs and ANZSNM for their guidance, assistance and support.
