

Biological small angle X-ray scattering beamline (BioSAXS)

Early August saw the arrival of the radiation shielding hutches for the fourth BRIGHT Beamline, BioSAXS, at the Australian Synchrotron. The European manufacturer is working alongside a Victorian engineering company and specialist engineering and technician teams from the Synchrotron, for a seamless installation. Completion of the hutches is on track for October 2021.

