

Safety Technician Program

Join our team for an exciting early career opportunity in Safety! Gain hands-on experience and qualifications, while being mentored in a culturally safe and inclusive environment.

You may not have heard of us, but we are a large science organisation outside Sydney with a commitment to address some of the challenges Australia is facing to create a more sustainable world, sustainable health and a sustainable environment.

We know that Indigenous cultural knowledge is an important part of finding solutions to those challenges.

Supported by the Sir William Tyree Foundation, the Safety Technician Program provides opportunities for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people to have a great career and a bright future...

The program structure focuses on training, professional development and hands-on experience with support from people across our site.

Our program offers:

full time employment with competitive salary

mentoring from experts on site

the chance to gain skills, qualification and experience in leading safety areas generous leave provisions, flexible work arrangements, access to support networks and employer funded learning and development

the opportunity to join a small circle of Indigenous staff who are thriving and an environment that respects the values of Indigenous culture

Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander graduates or students are encouraged to apply. ANSTO has a Reconciliation Action Plan and supports a diverse workforce. Please check us out.

ANSTO's Reconciliation Action Plan

VIEW

ANSTO's Indigenous Research Project Map

VIEW

ANSTO's Aboriginal cultural heritage

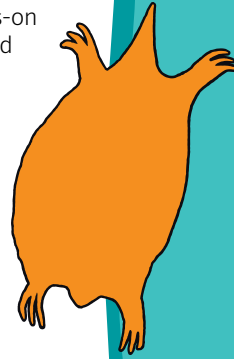

VIEW

For more information and to start your application, go to ANSTO Careers or call Laura Dascolias:

PHONE 02 9717 3675

EMAIL lad@ansto.gov.au

We are looking for two Indigenous students or graduates who are eager to learn and interested in exploring the possibilities of a career in Safety

